Paula Daniels, Co-founder, The Center for Good Food Purchasing
Paula Daniels is Co-founder, Chief of What's Next, and Founding Chair of the Center for Good Food Purchasing. The Center for Good Food Purchasing uses the power of procurement to create a transparent and equitable food system that prioritizes the health and well-being of people, animals, and the environment, through the nationally-networked adoption and implementation of the Good Food Purchasing Program by large institutions. The program received a 2018 Future Policy award from the World Future Council, UN FAO and IFOAM Organics International.

Paula is a lawyer and has held a number of senior positions in government in California and Los Angeles on water policy and food policy, including as Senior Advisor on Food Policy to Mayor Villaraigosa of Los Angeles. She is an Ashoka Fellow and a Stanton Fellow of the Durfee Foundation.

Devon Klatell, Managing Director, The Rockefeller Foundation
Devon Klatell joined The Rockefeller Foundation in 2013. As Managing Director, Food Initiative, she leads the Foundation’s work to advance a more nourishing and sustainable food system in the United States. Currently, Ms. Klatell is collaborating with schools, healthcare insurers, hospitals, food service businesses and policy advocates to increase consumption of healthy, protective foods by vulnerable communities. In addition, Ms. Klatell oversees our work to prevent wasted food in the U.S., which seeks to eliminate the enormous environmental, social, and economic costs caused by food waste.

Prior to taking on her current role, Ms. Klatell led the process to refresh the Foundation’s global point of view on food and agriculture. She also led the Foundation’s Strategic Planning team, which designed implementation models, resource plans, risk assessments and impact targets for the Foundation’s global initiatives. In that role, Devon worked on the Foundation’s initiatives to address energy poverty, connect unemployed African youth with the digital economy, and reduce postharvest losses. Before joining the Foundation, Devon was a management consultant at Katzenbach Partners and at Booz & Company. In these roles, she advised clients from a range of sectors on strategic, organizational, and employee engagement issues.
Noah Cohen-Cline, Lead Program Officer, The Rockefeller Foundation

Noah Cohen-Cline is a program officer with The Rockefeller Foundation’s Food Initiative, where his work focuses on food systems transformation in the United States. He oversees the foundation’s efforts on school nutrition in the U.S., as well as a “good food purchasing” strategy to direct public institutions’ food purchasing dollars to more nourishing, sustainable, and equitably sourced food.

Prior to his work for the Foundation, Mr. Cohen-Cline led the Clinton Global Initiative’s food and agriculture network. He also worked with International Food Policy Research Institute and American Jewish World Service, managing rural development programs in Indonesia, India, Kyrgyzstan, and other parts of the world.
